"What's In Your Treasure Box?"

It's been so good having Jenny home with us this weekend. We saw her for about 24 hours at the holiday season in Alexander City. Even though we talk each week, I miss her a great deal. We've been straightening and cleaning just like you do when you have company coming. It sure is easier to do those jobs when you have motivation!

Susan has had me going through some of my prized possessions and mementos in my old treasure box. I actually brought a bag of Jamaican coins to the building to share with our kids. I had a few books to donate to the library and there have been a few things found that I didn't even know were lost.

Dr. Mack Craig tells the story of a man he knew several years ago named Harry. Harry was an elderly gentleman when they got acquainted. His family had immigrated to the United States from Russia prior to World War I to escape the harassment and persecution being suffered by the Jewish population there.

Harry enjoyed conversation, and he came to trust Mack. One day he asked Mack for a favor. "I need somebody to go through my things with me," he said. Their paths crossed with some frequency, and the request was made again and again. Having put Harry off as long as he reasonably could about a task he didn't really yearn to perform, Mack finally agreed to help. He went to Harry's place with a secret fear that he might be in for hours of sorting through countless keepsakes accumulated over more than eight decades of living. So he was a bit surprised when Harry brought out a single shoebox.

In the box were the following items: a picture of Harry's mother, his wife's death certificate, two picture postcards written to Harry by a cousin over 30 years before, and two yellowed newspaper clippings about projects that involved work done by Harry's building demolition company.

NO gold or precious stones. NO stock certificates. NO award certificates or diplomas. Just simple mementos of life as Harry had experienced it. They served as reminders of things that were near and dear to his heart.

So what are you putting in YOUR shoebox? What is it that YOU hold near and dear to your heart?

The greatest blessing that you and I can cherish for eternity is to know that we have a relationship with God through His Son Jesus Christ. "For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men ... [through] Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works" (Titus 2:11, 14).
